Q. Why do beach huts and chalets require specialist cover? A. Because they face different risks from inland structures which are made from concrete and brick. Beach huts and chalets are generally made of timber which can be damaged more easily and also require a lot more maintenance. Beach huts and chalets face the added risks of storm, wind, storm surge as well as general sea damage. They also face risks of vandalism, malicious damage and arson when you are not at your hut or chalet.
